

Arlene Eakle's Genealogy Books and Information Products 2008

We have been selling genealogy how-to books since 1964 through the Genealogical Institute, Inc., its predecessor Genealogical Copy Service, and its dba Family History World (est. 1976). The need for a how-to-book on the research process in its entirety was high then and is still high today--almost 40 years later. Most genealogy how-to books, however, are source guides. They describe records in categories; some even use sample documents as illustrations. None of them present the entire research process. And none of these guides actually asks the reader to act. None, that is, except Family History For Fun and Profit and the publications based on this method of research. Other guides expect you to know what to search automatically and what to do with your data you collect.

How do you put all your stuff together?

An accurate family tree is linked by relationship a generation at a time. Too many pedigrees are linked by name and date only, with little regard for relationship.

So Linda, Afton, and I have written a series of genealogy research how-to books applying our own prize-winning, successful research process to special genealogy strategies no other publisher offers. Using these amazing guides, you too, can link your ancestral families by relationship. And we have made over a $1,000,000.00 (yes, a million dollars) doing professional genealogy research using the exact research techniques we tell you about within the pages of our books. You can trust these tools. We have a 96% success rate using these strategies and tools. And you can reach a 96% success rate too following our step-by-step directions.

Research is jurisdictional.

Each of our books is based on the "Jurisdictional Approach:" The sources you search are created by different levels of authority with specific interest and responsibility for the ancestors you seek--jurisdictions. If you search the right jurisdictions, you find the right ancestors.

We guarantee that you can find, and document, and prove the relationships of your ancestors:

1. ...If you profile your ancestor first, summarizing all that you and your family members know about that person.
2. ...If you summarize the facts, usually in chronological order, and match them with your family traditions, as well as your own personal knowledge and the personal knowledge of other family members.
3. ...If you search jurisdiction-by-jurisdiction, in pre-planned order, seeking additional information to expand and enhance the data you started with.
4. ...If you combine what you find in the records of each jurisdiction, building your lineage generation-by-generation.

Your guarantee from us:

You will prove the links and document your traditions, by following the step-by-step directions in each book. You will create a pedigree and a supporting family history that is linked by relationship-one that you can share with pride! This is our guarantee to you--or your money cheerfully refunded up to 12 months from the date you purchase from us.
